

Dr. Jennifer McCormick, Indiana's Superintendent of Public Instruction, assumed office in January 2017. She is a nationally recognized innovator and leader in education. Over the course of nearly two decades, Dr. McCormick has served at every level of the traditional public education system.

She has served on a number of community boards and makes her home in Muncie with her husband, Trent, a public school science teacher and longtime wrestling coach. They have one son, Cael, who attends West Point Military Academy.